

Roe stated that infant life after viability can be protected from killing. Viability according to Roe, is the moment at which the fetus can live outside the womb, “albeit with artificial support.” As a frozen embryo conceived through in vitro fertilization, Hannah was viable outside the womb from the moment of fertilization. She lived outside her mother's womb for many, many months before she was implanted into her adoptive mom, Marlene S. and raised by Marlene and her husband, John S., thus proving viability begins at the moment of conception. You can click here to read the press release about that. Click here to read the brief.